ABSTRACT

Financial data having multiple financial data elements is retrieved from a data source. A procedure identifies multiple rules associated with the financial data elements. Those multiple rules are applied to the financial data elements such that each of the financial data elements is associated with an identifier. The procedure then identifies additional information regarding a particular financial data element using the identifier associated with the financial data element.